

Case Study – Patient Advocate Stories

Ian Clements

Patient advocate, use MY data

I don't mind my data being shared.

I happen to be one of those people who think, if the state wants to know all about you, and then it knows about you anyway.

I'm sure the clinicians think they are maintaining confidentiality, and to some extent they probably are.

It's most surprising to me that despite my sharing of data with all of the medical people I meet - and I let them know how I'm involved in this - not one has asked me for my data.

We are building an online library, where the patient voice is heard direct, talking about the rewards of using their data
